NARROWLY ESCAPES TERRIBLE DEATH BY CRUSHING

Caught in the grip of a revolving crank shaft at the Richmond Chemical works, B. H. Marsh, 319 Nevin avenue, narrowly escaped being crushed to death yesterday afternoon. By a desperate lunge, Marsh threw h's body away from the grasp of the shaft, less than a foot from the point where his body would have been crushed to a pulp. His cries were heard by A. Lilly, a Standard Oil employee who was passing the plant and others who rushed in and gave the injured man temporary relief.

Marsh was rushed to the Abbott Emergency hospital where has was atended by Drs. U. S. Abbott and C. L. Abbott. His left arm was broken into two places: the left shoulder was dislocated and Marsh was bleeding from lacerations and abrasions about his body, face and head.

He will recover.

Marsh's clothing was torn to shreds. His outer garments were torn completely from his body, and his underclothing for the most part was wound about the machinery.

It is thought that Marsh attempted to put on a belt on the machine while the wheels were revolving. In a second he had been caught and wrenched by the shaft.

Marsh who is a chemist was experimenting with a yellow oakum paint when the accident occured. There were no employees about that section of the plant, and had Marsh been unable to free himself, he would have been crushed to death.

FORGOT TO SIGN BID: SO LOSES CHANCE

In making his bid for the contract for the Pullman school, R. Glaze, of San Francisco, who was low bidder, did not figure the requirements of the Board of Education, and was allowed to withdraw his bid. Glaze's bid was $9,242, which was $408 under any others and many of the board were skeptical if the work could be done at this figure. C. Overaa, local contractor was second lowest bidder with $9,698. Overaa neglected to sign his name to his bid and it was thrown out. The contract was awarded to M. Morton, Berkeley contractor whose bid was $9,697.

SPIKING THE GUNS

When Admiral Dewey came back from the Orient he was given a patriotic reception at Winsted, Conn.

The bells were rung, and to add to the serenade an old cannon, one which was captured from the Confederate forces during the war, was taken in hand to see if it could be fired.

It was found to be spiked.

A hole was bored into it and a small charge of powder put in and touched off.

The result was the discharge of an old shell from the cannon. It fell helpless about eight rods from the south of the gun.

Organized Labor has set in action a spirit that will some day spike the cannons of the world and paralyze all instruments of human destruction.

It is the spirit of actual and practical brotherhood.

THE WORST ENEMY OF LABOR

The worst enemies of Organized Labor are not outside the unions, but inside.

It was something like this Benjamin Harrison said about the republic.

We are not referring now to those who are seeking to destroy them.

There are plenty of these, and they are often those who would seem altogether above suspicion.

Many of them are perputual office holders. They manage to keep close to the management of the organizations.

The enemies we are now referring to are those who are honest and eager for the success of Organized Labor but are too easily led by those who would use them against the best interests of the organization.

The designing enemy is helpless unless he can use enough of the membership to carry on his crooked schemes.

The earnest, honest union man ought to be exceedingly careful in any action he takes.

The one thing he should ever remember is that the business of the labor union is to organize the workers and uphold the best ideals of manhood and citizenship.

This is the rule by which he should measure his conduct at all times.

Whenever a question is up in the union the thing he should do is to ask himself: What effect will this have in getting the workers united for their mutual advantage, and what will it do toward improving the interests of society?

The vision of the organized worker ought to be a clear and large one.

Too often he is deluded by some trivial, immediate interest into an act that is injurious to the larger and lasting interest.

STICK TOGETHER

Wendell Phillips said: "Have faith in each other. Stick together. If you want power in this country, if you want to make yourselves felt, if you do not want your children to wait long years before they have bread on their table they ought to have, the leisure in their lives they ought to have, the opportunities in life they ought to have—if you don't want to wait yourself, write on your banner and shut every political trimmer can read it, so that every politician, no matter how shortsighted he may be, can read it, 'We Never Forget!' " If the wage earners devote themselves to their own cause with more serious determination and loyalty their interests will be less often infringed upon by men in public life or by greedy employers.

HIGH WAGES?

During the year 1914, according to government reports just at hand, certain western railroads paid $43,000,000 in dividends on common and preferred stock (which was practically all water) the paper value of which was $485, 392,837. The total amount paid in wages by the same roads to engineers and firemen in the same space of time was $39,474,305. In other words, dividends on the watered stock of these lines amounted in one year to nearly four million dollars more than the total outlay in wages to engineers and firemen, and these dividends take no account of interest paid on bonds, short-time notes and other charges which railroads regard as preferred lien and pay before they begin to accumulate for dividends on their preferred and common stocks. Is it any wonder the laboring man does not feel that he is getting his?

JUSTICE, NOT GUSH NEEDED

What mankind needs is more justice and less love, said the Rev. C. R. Zahniser, in a sermon in Pittsburg. "Justice and love are not comparable," said the speaker. "They are not in the same sategory. Love is a faction of the mind, of soul: justice is a characteristic of the actions and relations of man to man. To talk about substituting justice for love is like proposing to adjust the machinery of a mill so well that there would be no need of engines or power plant. The type of love we are needing is that which expresses itself in justice rather than in cheap, gushing sentimentally. The world is sick and tired of the 'love' that sends toys to a sick child and opposes child labor law, gives nickle to cripples and opposes workmens compensation, or 'pities' the poor and grinds labor below a living wage. Constructive service is indeed what the world is sorely needing. But that is the kind of love for which Christianity stands."

Wonder if they'll stand for some poetry? How about it customers? Awright, here goes:

TOUGH LUCK

The rain fell fast
And the wind blew past
With fury unabated.
But what cared I
For before my eye
A dainty chicken waited
A car stopped near
And this lass dear
Became really excited
But as for me
I prepared to see
Something unexpected
And so I did
A jitney slid
And the vision obliterated.

AT THE RICHMOND

Sunday vaudeville reaches its highest notch today at the Richmond theater when an all star bill, including nine superb artists will be presented by the management. The bill will be headed by two acts direct from the Empress theater, both of which have been headliners in the biggest circuits of the country.

The program will be headed by "The Four Wanderers" a comedy music and singing novelty, and Amelia Von L. Drew, a toe ballet and acrobatic dancing performance. Then there will be Belle Wilton the famous character comedienne with new and original features for an act which has been a screem wherever shown. Alberta & Rosella a European comedy novelty is also an attractive act. Four fine reels from the Mutual Film corporation will also be shown.

REGENT THEATER

Today's program at the Regent theater is featured by a three part film "My Lost One." The film deals with stage life and carries an excellent moral. A special attraction has been prepared by the management of the popular playhouse in Mrs. De Greggorio, well known local singer who will sing several selections. Charlie Chaplan, the king of the funmakers and a Cartoon laugh will provide the comedy end of the program.
